Outside installation cabinets for water softeners

Being able to locate a water softener outside in a weather proof housing is a big benefit to many householders where space internally is limited, or unavailable, preventing a normal installation taking place. An outside cabinet allows both the softener and all, or some, of the installation pipe work to be located neatly away from the limitations often imposed by difficult kitchen cupboard layouts and appliances.

Not all water softeners available in the UK take kindly to this kind of set up. Aqua-Nouveau SOFFLOW electric softeners can be installed outside if the location is sheltered. Most non electric machines, such as the KINETICO, can work well in an outside cabinet. This is because most of the internal workings of the machine are sealed within the body of the product.

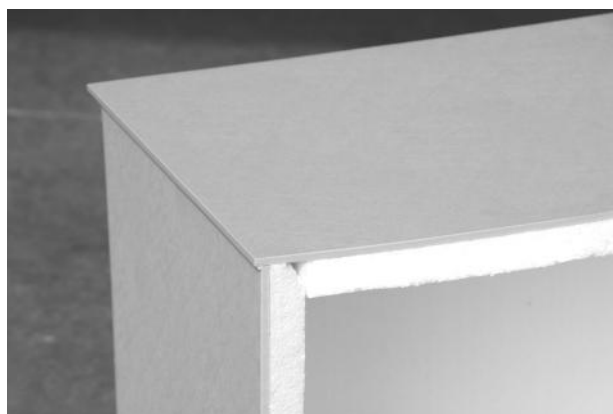

It is important that an outside cabinet is not sited where access may be restricted or where it can be knocked or moved inadvertently. Also, locations open to extremes of weather should be avoided particularly walkways and passages where a 'wind tunnel effect' could see extremes of rain and low temperatures. Always take the advice of your sales advisor.

The outside cabinet range available from Aqua-Nouveau are manufactured from an embossed polypropylene with welded edges. The interior is lined with a polystyrene insulation. The cabinets are very strong and rigid while remaining fairly light. The cabinets are finished in black or beige. They can be painted or sprayed to match the wall or brick colour.

The cabinets are available in two sizes. The prices reflect that these products are not requested often and are built to order by hand. All dimensions shown are internal including polystyrene lining:
